General Information

Often research done by undergraduates goes unpublished; this research may be done to fulfill a thesis requirement or merely to participate in research, but the fact remains that this work goes unreported. Impulse is in the process of changing that situation. Modeled after MARSci (marsci.schc.sc.edu), an undergraduate publication in the Marine Sciences, Impulse promises to be the first online, undergraduate, international, and inter-institutional journal for the Neurosciences. The entire review process from submission of the abstract to publication of each issue will be done electronically. This promises to bring to light work that undergraduates do in the neurosciences, while giving these future neuroscientists valuable experience in the writing and publishing aspects of science that they rarely receive.

Supported by the South Carolina Honors College.
